

Cluttons is a leading independent firm of property consultants, steeped in history (tracing their roots back to 1765 no less).

Our brief was to completely redesign the old Cluttons website, giving it a far more contemporary look and feel with the whole (frankly enormous) site powered by the Sitecore content management system. Turns out it was a pretty complicated task, especially given the multitude of external information and property feeds that had to be accommodated within the design and CMS, but we like to think we've pulled it off with not a little panache.

The site's been very well received since we launched it, with a host of international microsites also in place.