

Top 100 law firm Russell-Cooke used to have website before they came to us, but it was showing its age a bit and if viewed in Internet Explorer 8, not showing at all. As part of a rebrand across the partnership they commissioned Frontmedia to create a brand new site that would offer clients current and potential, a wealth of useful information.

The client was (understandably) not keen to fill the site with the same shiny, happy business people that populate a million other websites and opted instead, for our suggestion that we use typography and their new corporate colours to give the site its distinctive identity.

The extensive backend built on our very own Front CMS gives the client total control of the site in a simple and intuitive way, ensuring the site remains simple to update, even when the content is complex.